

Craig Hamasaki, MD
Ho'ōla Physician Partner in Aiea, HI

Dr. Craig Hamasaki is a distinguished internal medicine specialist with over 39 years of experience. He currently practices in Aiea, Hawaii. Born and raised in Honolulu, Dr. Hamasaki embarked on his medical journey at the University of California at Irvine, where he earned a Bachelor of Science degree before obtaining his medical degree from U.C. Irvine—California College of Medicine.

Returning to Hawaii for further medical training, Dr. Hamasaki completed the University of Hawaii Medical Residency Training Program's Primary Care Track. He began his internal medicine practice at the Fronk Clinic in Honolulu in 1987, extending his expertise to various medical groups in Aiea, Long Beach, and Huntington Beach. In 2002, Dr. Hamasaki opened his private practice in Aiea.

He holds the distinction of being the first physician to join Ho'ōla, a medical group aimed at aligning independent physicians in Hawaii. As Ho'ōla's first physician partner, Dr. Hamasaki plays a pivotal role in onboarding and developing new physicians, leveraging his extensive experience and deep understanding of the medical landscape in Hawaii.

Passionate about creating a sustainable future for independent physicians in Hawaii, Dr. Hamasaki is dedicated to fostering collaboration and support within the medical community. His commitment to advancing healthcare in Hawaii and his unwavering dedication to patient care make him a respected figure in internal medicine.

“Why did I join Ho'ōla? The simple answer is that I love practicing medicine, but not so much for running a small business. Everything is more complicated. Staffing, equipment, supplies, leases, contracts, I can go on and on. After caring for patients all day and charting all night, when do I have time to get to these things? Now, I don't have to. I can simply practice medicine.”
